

Fresh hope for RAF Cosford?

Thursday 3rd June 2010, 11:30AM BST.

FROM THE SHROPSHIRE STAR NEWSPAPER

There was fresh hope today for campaigners fighting to keep Shropshire's RAF Cosford alive as a military base, writes London Reporter Sunita Patel.

David Cameron has announced that the award of a huge defence training project to another air force station in South Wales was under "review".

The Prime Minister said an "incredibly strong case" had been made for the construction of a defence super-centre at RAF St Athan.

However, he stopped short of guaranteeing the £13bn project would get the green light from the Conservative-Liberal Democrat coalition.